Single

a documentary film

Single? You're in good company.

There are 100 million unmarried adults in America and for the first time ever, the majority of US households are headed by an unmarried person.

Find that surprising?

The simple explanation is that we marry later, divorce a lot, and live longer. But there's more to it than that.

Some people choose to be single, some don't. Some like being single, some don't.

The future of marriage is pretty secure, at least in the US. It still remains the highest form of commitment that most adults feel they can aspire to and most people will eventually marry. But as a society, we have to come to terms with the fact that marriage is no longer the only game in town.

Today's life is more complex, intense, and demanding. Finding and maintaining a lasting relationship has become even more challenging.

- The accelerated evolution of women in the latter part of the 20th century has resulted in many more lifestyle choices for both men and women.
- We live in a youth obsessed, instant gratification, attention deficit world.
- Our expectations of finding the "perfect" partner and maintaining the "perfect" relationship have never been higher.

The game has dramatically changed.
Should you have a plan?
